THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

CHAPTER I

The first part of the history of the United States is the history of the colonies.

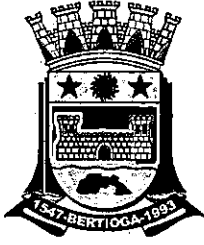

The colonies were first settled by Englishmen in 1607. They were at first dependent on England for their supplies and protection. But as they grew in number and power, they began to assert their independence. They demanded that they should be treated as free and independent states, and not as subjects of a distant king. This led to a series of conflicts with England, which culminated in the American Revolution of 1776. The colonies declared their independence from England, and established a new government for themselves. This government was the first of its kind in the world, and it was based on the principles of liberty and equality. The American Revolution was a great event in the history of the world, and it led to the establishment of a new nation, the United States of America.

The second part of the history of the United States is the history of the early years of the new nation. The United States was founded in 1776, and it was at first a weak and divided country. The states were not united, and they often fought with each other. But as the years passed, the states began to unite, and they formed a strong and powerful nation. This was the result of the American Revolution, and it was a great achievement of the American people.

The third part of the history of the United States is the history of the expansion of the new nation. The United States grew from a small country on the eastern coast to a great nation that stretched across the continent. This was the result of the westward expansion of the United States, and it was a great achievement of the American people. The westward expansion was a process that began in the early years of the new nation, and it continued for many years. It was a process that led to the discovery of new lands, and it led to the establishment of new states. The westward expansion was a great event in the history of the United States, and it led to the establishment of a great nation.

The fourth part of the history of the United States is the history of the Civil War. The Civil War was a great event in the history of the United States, and it led to the establishment of a new nation, the United States of America.
